

Abstract

The study aims to identify the level of job satisfaction in its five dimensions (nature of work, working conditions, salary and rewards, relations with the official and colleagues, esteem and respect (among social workers working in government hospitals and health centres in Jeddah City).

The study followed the Social Survey methodology, and the tool consisted of a (70) Paragraph of a five-pronged identification (nature of work, working conditions salary and rewards, relations with officials and colleagues, appreciation and respect), the study was applied to a sample of (85) specialists and specialist Social workers of government hospitals and health centres in Jeddah City.

The results of the study found that the level of satisfaction of social workers working in government hospitals and health centres in Jeddah was about (the nature of the work, working conditions, salary and rewards, relations with officials and colleagues) was in general (moderate); satisfaction level was appreciated Professional respect (high).

In the light of these findings, the study recommended improving the regulatory procedures for the work of the medical social worker and providing suitable working conditions for social workers, review the system of salaries and rewards in proportion to living conditions and their variables, develop a system of rewards, and develop awareness of the importance Relationships in improving the working environment, making further efforts in the area of community recognition of medical social service, and estimating the roles of social workers within the medical team.